

Women Empowerment for Household and Community Food Security in the Context of Climate Change in Africa - PROF ANGELINE MULWA

The International Consortium for Social Development (ICSD) Africa Branch is showcasing and promoting the work of social development scholars, practitioners and policy makers in Africa as part of the working paper series of webinars under the ICSD Africa Branch. In this second webinar of the series, Prof Angeline Mulwa presents her paper titled:

Women Empowerment for Household and Community Food Security in the Context of Climate Change in Africa

Dr Angelina Mulwa is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Education at the University of Nairobi Kenya with teaching experience of over 18 years. She is a specialist in Seasonal Livelihood Programming, online training, Project Management, Monitoring and Evaluation, Research, Distance Education and Academic mentorship. Within the University, she is in charge of conferences, webinars, innovations development of short courses and partnership mobilisation. She collaborates with many universities globally (Madagascar, Zimbabwe, Sudan, Jordan, Israel, Uganda, Eswatini, Ethiopia) through the World Food Programme to capacity build nations and vulnerable communities Food security resilience building to address the effects of climate. She has published many journal articles and authored books in the area of research, education and monitoring and evaluation. She has attended and presented papers in multiple international and local conferences. She has worked with the World Food Programme in Food Security projects both in Kenya and Zimbabwe. Conducted Integrated Context Analysis (ICA) using the innovative 3PA planning and design tools to develop and strengthen National and sub-national level programming, planning capacities. She supervised students' research work in social sciences and participated in social development activities. She is a member of the International Project Monitoring and Evaluation Society, Kenya Association of Project Managers. She is currently the coordinator of the Partnership between the University of Nairobi and the World Food Programme (WFP) on the Three Pronged Approach (3PA) Adaptation to Resilience Building against Food Security. She has special interest in resource mobilisation for sustainable development.

DATE: 30 July 2024

Time: 10h00 - 11h30

REGISTER HERE

---